

She was art. She was enigma. She was incongruous.
She smiled too little and cursed too often. She was too much to handle, too little to hold. She was that girl, with a whisky in her hand and cigarette on her breath.